By Scott Manning A few years ago, I came into possession of National Geographic's Battles of the Civil War Wall Map. For trying to encapsulate the campaigns of the entire war on a 36' x 23' canvas, it does an amazing job. Dots cover the map, helping to provide some concept of how the battles were numerous and extended across the country. It uses arrows to indicate the major campaigns of the North and South. Of course, it also displays snapshots of the major battles. I have taken this map across several jobs during my career and it is a great conversation starter. The reactions from my coworkers are always entertaining. Some are amazed at some of the places that saw action. Others are amazed at the number of battles. An individual always wants to point out where they were born or where they have traveled, which always leads to a discussion on some random battle. On battlefields, I use the Battles of the Civil War Laminated Wall Map. This is certainly the best damn Civil War map I have ever seen. If you know of a better one, please tell me about it. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Great for small groups or individual projects - small print By cookie Great for small groups or individual projects for students, print is detailed, but too small for a large class assignment. 4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Good Quality Map By C130I bought this map for my "Civil War Buff" husband. I went to local stores and was unable to find what I was looking for. Was happy to find it on - it is a good quality map. I had the map matted and framed and it looks great in his office.
